The ministry of good works

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER
THE MINISTRY OF GOOD WORKS
Lesson for: May 6, 1984
Bible Study Passages: James 1:22-27; 2:14-24
INTRODUCTION

The Book of James places a lot of emphasis upon Christian works. The author wrote to impress upon Christians the importance of "doing" as opposed to being "hearers only." James explicitly states throughout his epistle that faith is evidenced with works.

Too often the church places too much emphasis upon attendance than upon living the Christian life-style in the marketplace. At times the sheep of the flock are overfed with a steady diet of what to believe but not enough of how to put beliefs into action.

The story is told that a poor woman who lived in a ghetto received numerous invitations to attend church. A friend remarked to her, "Why don't you attend that church? Those people seem so interested in your soul." The woman responded, "That's the problem; they are concerned about my soul but not about me."

Such an illustration reminds us that the church is called of Christ to express concern for people's spiritual, emotional and physical needs. Our study in James will hopefully sensitize us to the ministry of doing for others in the name and spirit of Christ.

LISTENING AND OBEYING[James 1:22-25]

Some think it is more meritorious to hear the Word proclaimed than to act it out. But a sermon is not an end in and of itself; it is a means to an end. To hear and not do is contradictory to the purpose of proclamation. James does not push for indoctrination; he is concerned about putting one's faith into action. Thus, the spoken Word always carries with it an ethical implication.

Going to church does not fulfill one's religious commitment. We may think we possess spiritual security by supposing that God expects nothing more from us. The Christian has obligation to act out his/her faith in ways that benefit others. We are to mirror the grace and love of Christ through our compassionate deeds.

DECEIVING RELIGION [James 1:26-27]

James argues that "pure religion is not measured by the words that flow from our mouths." He is very much concerned that Christians demonstrate social and spiritual care for those in need. James argues that faith and good works go hand in hand. James does not mean to suggest social concern devoid of piety. Purity before God and concern for the physical needs of our brothers and sisters are parallel companions in the Christian life.

A WORKING FAITH [James 2:14-24]

A faith without works is dead. James reads like a running argument between himself and another person. He tries to convince any critic that faith must show forth itself in compassion to needy people.

James supports his argument with a illustration from the Old Testament. It is interesting that James points to the same figure as did Paul - Abraham. Paul used Abraham to prove salvation apart from the law. James used Abraham to show how his deeds provided evidence of his faith.

James never denies the sound importance of faith. His writing tells us that faith without works may cause the unbelieving world to doubt our sincerity.

Class members may discuss the following questions:

1. What does the following statement mean to you: "If the church does not bear fruits relevant to the needs of people, people will see no relevance in needing the church."

2. What are some ways the Christian can demonstrate his/her faith?

Decide how you will put your faith into action this week by choosing someone to care for.

Day of prayer set for May 3

By FRANCES ABBITT

Thursday, May 3 is National Day of Prayer.

An old familiar hymn goes like this..."ere you left your room this morning, did you think to pray?"

President Ronald Reagan has set aside May 3 as National Day of Prayer and asks every American, to take the time to think and pray.

Horace W. Coleman is chairman of the National Day of Prayer for the Appomattox area and he urges all Appomattox County citizens to participate in this day of prayer in line with the theme "Take 5 at 12". At 12 noon on May 3, Appomattox County citizens are asked to unite with Americans everywhere in five minutes of unified prayer for our nation.

In II Chronicles 7:14 we are told, "If my people, who are called by my name, will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and will forgive sin, and will heal their land."

Included in the proclamation for this national day of prayer are these words:

"In 1787, a then-elderly Benjamin Franklin said to George Washington as he presided over the Constitutional Convention, 'I have lived, sir, a long time, and the longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without his notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without his aid?'

The National Day of Prayer Task Force of the National Prayer Committee has named three goals.

(1) To mobilize prayer, that, in the words of Abraham Lincoln, recognizes "the supreme authority and just government of Almighty God."

(2) To heighten the nation's awareness of our dependence upon God and of the importance of prayer.

(3) To encourage the healing of our nation and world through prayer that seeks Almighty God.

The first national day of prayer was declared by the Continental Congress in 1775. Through the years other national days of prayer have been declared. In 1952, by joint approval, the two houses of Congress called upon the president to set aside a suitable day each year as National Day of Prayer. This year will be the 32nd consecutive observance.

"I hope all Appomattox citizens of all faiths will respond to the National Day of Prayer and especially to the call for "5 minutes at 12" on May 3. Whatever you are, pause and thank God for the many blessings we enjoy, including our freedom itself, and ask God's continued blessings on our town, county, state and nation in the days to come," Coleman concluded.
